 v. I am sick _____ these long journeys.

Q. No. 6 Make a précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: (25)
 There are various ways of getting at a knowledge of character—by books, words, actions. The first of these which seems the most superficial, is perhaps the safest and least liable to deceive: nay, it is that which mankind inspite of their pretending to the contrary, most generally go by. Professions pass for nothing and action may be counterfeited; but a man cannot help his looks. A man's whole life may be a lie to himself and others: and yet a picture painted of him by a great artist would probably stamp his true character on the canvas and betray the secret to prosperity. A man's look is the work of years. It is stamped on his countenance by the events of his whole life; nay, more, by the hand of nature, and it is not to be got rid of easily. There is, as it has been remarked repeatedly, something in a person's appearance at first sight which we do not like, and that gives us an odd twinge, but which is overlooked in a multiplicity of other circumstances, till the mask is taken off and we see this lurking character verified in the plainest manner in the sequel. We are struck at first and by chance, with what is peculiar and characteristic; also with permanent traits and general effects: this afterwards goes off in a set of unmeaning common place details. This sort of pama facie evidence, then, shows that a man is better than what he says or does; for it shows us the habit of his mind, which is the same under all circumstances and disguises. You will say, on the other hand, that there is no judging by appearances as a general rule. No one for instance, would take such a person for a clever man without knowing him. When then to one, he is not; he may have got the reputation but is a mistake.

Q-7. Write a précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: 20

In the mind of every forcible writer there are certain predilections which determine the current of his thoughts and select and shape his imagery. These predilections result from sensitive spots in the author's nature, or from early and powerful impression stamped upon the mind. Mental images conceived in some vivid moments of joy and sorrow haunt the chamber of the brain, ghosts of some forgotten experience which create the metaphors and fashion the vision of the writer. Early experiences, moments of intense feeling, permanently colour one's imagination and mark out the channels of future thoughts. In some luminous and perhaps forgotten hours Homer felt the beauty of the sea and the mystery of the moving air and ever afterward their magic recurred in his songs. Virgil was peculiarly affected by the beauty of the trees. The loveliness of flowers touched repeatedly and vigorously the highly strung and admiration of their gifts, for the art is so rare that we ought to welcome it when we find it: and like all art, it depends to a great extent for its sustenance on the avowed gratitude of those who enjoy it. It is on these subtle half-toned glimpses of personality and difference that most of our happy impressions of life depend, and no one can afford willfully to neglect sources of innocent joy or to lose opportunities of pleasure through a stupid or brutal contempt for the slender resources of which these gentle effects are produced.

Good Luck

- The two friends were jesting their rivals.

Q.No.6. Make a précis of the following passage, assign it a suitable title and explain the underlined words: (30)

Pride and envy have done great damage to mankind, and in a variety of ways. Pride generates a sense of superiority, whether of sex, colour, race or religion. In no case does this pride have any rational basis. For example, except for having tougher muscles, the male does not have any inherent superiority over the female. Fantastic reasons were given in support of the view that the male is superior; that the male foetus acquires a soul in six weeks while the female does so only after six months. At the conscious level, most forms of superiority have now greatly declined. However, even in America, the sense of equality still works mostly only upwards, every one regards those above him to be his equals, but thinks that he is superior to those below him. In Russia a new privileged class has appeared the proletariat. Pride of creed makes one look upon all who profess a different faith as sinners, who are surely doomed for hell. Envy does much harm in personal life, but even in public and international life envy and selfishness are responsible for breeding an entirely false conception of self-interest. Russel explains this with the help of the story of an imaginary baker and as butcher who are under the misconception that monopoly of trade world make them immensely rich. Every nation today seems to be pursuing an economic policy which is based on the misconception that her economic interest is opposed to that of every other nation. This is the assence of the pernicious idea of economic nationalism.

(iii) A cruel king ruled ..... the island. (iv) Children take ..... their parents.
(v) Strictly adhere ..... the rules and regulations.

Q-6. Make a Précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: (25)

The whole psychology of emotion and instincts is as yet in its infancy, a beginning has been made by psycho-analysis, but only a beginning. What we may accept from psycho-analysis is the fact that people will, in action pursue various ends which they do not consciously desire, and will have an attendant set of quite irrational beliefs which enable them to pursue these ends without knowing that they are doing so. But orthodox psycho-analysis has unduly simplified our unconscious purposes which are numerous and different from one person to another. It is to be hoped that social and political phenomena will soon come to be understood from this point of view, and will thus throw light on average human nature.

Moral self control and external prohibition of harmful acts are not adequate methods of dealing with our anarchic instincts. The reason they are inadequate is that these instincts are capable to as many disguises as the Devil in medieval legend, and some of these disguises deceive even the elect. The only adequate method is to discover what are the needs of our instinctive nature, and then to search for the least harmful way of satisfying them. Since spontaneity is what is most thwarted by machines. The only thing that can be provided is opportunity. The use made of opportunity must be left to the initiative of the individual. No doubt understanding human nature must be the basis of any real improvement in human life.

Q-7. Make a précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: (20)

The noblest of souls can find full satisfaction for his aspirations in the sustained effort to do his duty in the work that lies at hand to the utmost that is in him. It is the function of education in the highest sense to teach him that there are latent in him possibilities beyond what he has dreamed of and to develop capacities of which without contact with the highest learning, he had never become aware. And so the university becomes, at its best, the place where the higher ends of life are made possible of attainment, where the finite and the infinite are found to come together. The wider our outlook, the more we have assimilated the spirit of the teachers of other nations and other ages than our own, the more will be the possibilities of action open to us, and the more real may become the choice of that high aim of man, the dedicated life. We learn so to avoid the unconscious devotion of our energies to that for which we are not fit, and peril of falling unconsciously into insincerity and unreality of purpose. We learn to choose the work that is most congenial to us, because we find into what makes us keenly conscious that we are bringing into actual existence that best that lies latent in us. The wider our look, the deeper sympathy, the keener insight, which this kind of culture gives, do not paralyse a man. They may teach him his own limits and the more he has learnt his lesson the more will he realize these limits. But they do not dishearten him, for he has become familiar with the truth that the very essence of consciousness and of life is to be aware of limits and to strive to overcome them.

  - He acts as if he is mad.

OR

Write a paragraph on "Honesty won't pay here"

- Q-7. Write a précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: (20)

It has been a subject of mild speculation with me why all the literature of dress should be confined to women. On the face of it we might suppose that it was only women who wore clothes at all, and certainly only women who cared what cloths they wore or made a science of wearing them. No doubt this is largely true. You will hear women discuss dress on the bus as earnestly and continuously as their boys discuss cricket, or their husbands discuss stocks and shares, or motor cars, or golf or the wickedness of politicians. I have never yet heard two men discuss dress in the abstract for two minutes. You might sit in any smoking room, in any men's club in London for a year without hearing a remark on the fashion in ties or trousers, or a single comment on the fact that this or that person was well or ill dressed. If dress is mentioned at all, it is mentioned in an ironical vein, as a matter fitting, perhaps, for a light jest among friends but nothing more.

This must not be taken to mean, I think, that men are wholly indifferent to dress. It does not fill anything like the place in their mind that it fills in the mind of women, and there is an unwritten convention among them that it is bad form almost bordering on the improper to talk about cloths. It would smack of vanity in regard to one's personal appearance. Women can talk about clothes without this sense of personal vanity. They talk about it in a detached way as they might talk about pictures, or music, or any other aesthetic subject. They are interested in it objectively as an art. They like to see pretty dresses, even though they cannot hope to wear them. They throng to a wedding, not so much from interest in the principles as from a desire to see the cloths the bride wears. They like to see them much as they might like to hear a beautiful performance on the violin, although they themselves can hope to play the violin.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION FOR THE POST(S) OF BCS (EB) OFFICER D-17

ENGLISH

Marks: 100

Saturday, February 24, 2007 (0230 PM)

Time: 03 Hours

Q-1. Write an Essay on any One of the following topics: (30)
(i) Prosperity Gains Friends and Adversity Tries them.
(ii) Life is Real, Life is Earnest.
(iii) Democracy in Theory and Practice.
(iv) National Prejudices.

Q-2. Write a letter to the Education Secretary requesting him to instruct the Heads of Educational Institutions to inculcate in the minds of their students the sense that the National Flag must be respected. (10)

Q-3. Use the following Idioms in your sentences to bring out their meaning clearly: (10)
(i) An eye-wash (ii) To make ducks and drakes of (iii) To set at naught
(iv) To come into line with. (v) To mind one's P's and Q's.

Q-4. Use the following pair of words in sentences to bring out their meaning clearly: (10)
(i) Expedient / Expeditious (ii) Veracity / Voracity (iii) Wreath / Wreathe
(iv) Hypercritical / Hypocritical (v) Deprecate / Depricate.

Q-5. Write a paragraph on "A world Government is both desirable and necessary. Countries should simply become the states of one nation, the Earth. In this way, war could be eliminated and wealth could be equally distributed". (10)

Q-6. Correct the following sentences: (10)
(i) I don't enjoy to play card games.
(ii) After graduating from College, my father wants me to join his business firm.
(iii) By obeying the speed limit, we can save energy, lives and it costs us less.
(iv) My friends as well as I am doing this work.
(v) Because my country is located in a subtropical area, so the weather is hot.

Q-7. Write a précis of the following passage and assign a suitable title: (20)
The psychological, even the intellectual, benefits of marriage seem to me to be enormous. If a man has lived for some years in the closest intimacy with a woman, he learns to look at life from her point of view as well as his own. A man who can not do this is like a man blind in one eye. He doesn't appreciate the solidity and depth of the world before him. The ideas I am putting before you here are largely my wife's or at any rate, family ideas, rather than my own private productions. The unmarried woman is perhaps even worse off than the unmarried man; and few women seem to me to be psychologically complete till they have become mothers. During the Middle Ages Europe was far too much influenced by celibate men. Today much too big a part in public life is played by the celibate women, and too little by mothers. I find few ideas more genuinely disgusting than that held by many education authorities that a woman ceases to be suitable as a teacher when she becomes a mother. Because I have so high an opinion of marriage at its best, I think that it should be possible to end it if it fails for any of a number of reasons, instead of, as now, for one only. This is called "undermining" the sanctity of marriage.
